

Hello!

Thank you for your interest in volunteering at Silver Maples of Chelsea!

Attached is the volunteer packet. It includes:

- Application
- Volunteer compliance/confidentiality statement
- Photo release form
- Tips for Working with Seniors
- Volunteer Activity Opportunities

At first, this might seem like a lot of paperwork, but please know that we have to be thorough with people working with seniors, who are sometimes considered a vulnerable population.

Please plan to complete this packet and then we can set up a time for a tour of Silver Maples and talk about what you'd like to do when you are volunteering at Silver Maples.

It's easiest to communicate via email (ckeiser@silvermaples.org), but you can also call me at 734.475.1490. Ext. #234

I hope to meet you soon. Thanks again!

Sincerely,

Cece Keiser

TIPS FOR VOLUNTEERS WORKING WITH RESIDENTS

Thank you for volunteering at Silver Maples of Chelsea. Your time and energy plays a big role in helping us keep our residents engaged and active! Here are some tips and information that might be helpful as you work with our residents. And remember, we have wonderful residents with a wealth of history to share. Enjoy your time with them!

Working With Seniors

- Bring a cheerful attitude to the day. Instead of focusing on aging issues (immobility, illness, or frailty) focus on having a positive interaction with the seniors.
- Always approach the resident from the front and tell the person who you are (perhaps each time you meet).
- Be patient. Take your time communicating and try to use the senior's name frequently. Seniors may not move or talk as fast as they have in the past, so making eye contact, speaking clearly at a moderate level and maintaining a calm, positive attitude will help establish a pleasant atmosphere for interaction. Give them time to process the information and respond.
- Be a great listener. Encourage the senior to talk about their past. Topics such as families, work experiences and growing up years are often easier for seniors to remember since in many cases their long-term memories are clearer than their short-term memories.
- Communicate in a variety of ways. Remember that spending time with seniors is what is important. Even if the senior is having trouble communicating verbally, show them you care by using non-verbal communication, such as touching their back or holding their hand. The companionship and the impact of the volunteer's company are what really matter.
- Provide an opportunity for success through appropriate activities and interaction.

Things to Avoid

- Do not give direct care - such as toileting, feeding, transferring from wheelchair to regular chair. Call a staff person for help.
- Do not touch blood/body fluids
- Do not make phone calls for residents without permission
- Never purchase items for residents without permission
- Never borrow items or accept gifts from residents
- Never lend money to residents
- Do not leave the building with residents without permission
- Do not look at residents' medical charts
- Never give food/drink to a resident, unless it is an activity where food is being served
- Do not help a resident up when they have fallen down. Call staff to help
- Do not give physical therapy

Wheelchair Hints

- When listening to a person in a wheelchair, try to stay at their eye level. Crouch down or kneel, or pull up a chair and sit for an extended conversation.
- If the senior is capable of wheeling their own chair, allow and encourage them to do so.
- Ask them if they are ready to go before you move the chair, and remind them where you are going.
- Don't "drive" too fast.

Before you move a wheelchair, make sure that:

- The senior's arms are placed inside the armrests and feet are securely placed on the wheelchair's foot pedals.
- The senior's clothing will not drag on the floor or get caught in the wheels.
- The hand brakes are in the unlocked position (or locked after you arrive at the destination).

Common Disabilities

- After STROKES, residents are often weak. Certain parts of his/her body may only have partial or limited use. Speech could be impaired.
- Residents with severe HEART conditions will often need rest periods. Any pains in the neck, arm, or chest area should be reported to staff immediately.
- DEMENTIA is the pronounced and abnormal loss of mental and cognitive ability in the elderly. By age 70, many people will have some sort of normal age-related memory loss, but dementia and Alzheimer's—a kind of dementia—is pronounced and can range from mild to severe.
- Residents with VISION problems may need larger print and assistance when moving around. Offer your arm, rather than taking the resident's as this may startle them. Remember that residents who have lost their vision are often fully capable in other ways, including hearing, decision making, and cognitive abilities.
- When working with residents with HEARING loss, remember to speak only after you have attracted their attention. Residents with hearing loss will often take in many clues to help them communicate, including non-verbal communication, such as gestures. Avoid speaking rapidly or in a high pitched voice. In severe cases, it can be effective to use pen/paper and pictures.

Working with Seniors with Alzheimer's / Dementia

Seniors living with Alzheimer's and dementia sometimes need some extra attention and patience. When working with these populations please keep in mind:

- Call the person by name, it helps orient them and gets their attention.
- Enter their reality. Sometimes it's the past, sometimes it's the moment at hand.
- Avoid criticizing, correcting and arguing.
- Look for the feelings behind the words; sometimes the emotions being expressed are more important than what is being said.
- Always approach the person from the front and tell the person who you are.
- Use short, simple words and sentences. Talk slowly and clearly.
- Ask one question at a time.
- Limit choices to one or two specific choices. For example, "Would you like red ribbon or blue ribbon?" rather than "What color ribbon would you like?" or "Would you like, yellow, green, blue, red, or pink ribbon?"
- Repeat information and questions. If the person doesn't respond, wait a moment, and then ask again.
- Avoid quizzing. Reminiscing can be healthy, but avoid asking, "Do you remember when...?"
- Give simple explanations. Avoid using logic and reason at great length. Give a complete response in a clear and simple way.
- When a resident who is suffering from memory loss asks you what day it is, you may think it will stimulate their thinking to respond, "What day do you think it is?" However, anyone with severe memory loss often has lost the ability to reason and often cannot remember the days of the week or their spouses name and find their inability to answer frustrating. The best way to respond is to give him the correct information promptly.

Other Helpful Tips

- Speak clearly and moderately, with an emphasis on lowering your voice. Higher pitches are harder for those with a hearing loss to hear.
- Hold hands, steady arms, etc. for unsteady residents
- Hold chairs when they are being seated
- Assist residents on and off the bus. Help fasten seatbelts
- Hold walker from the front when a resident is going down a ramp. Support from behind when going up.
- Never enter a residents room without knocking first and getting confirmation to enter.
- Safety first!
- Ask questions!
- Get to know our residents! They enjoy getting to know you!
